The Thirty-second lows was a Egating regiment in every sense, and is credited with some of the hardest highting during the war. The regiment first went campaigning in Missouri and was at Cape Girardeau on April 26ta, 1863, when the Confederate General Marmacuke attacked the pace with a force of 10,000. At this time the union forces only numbered 3500, but they managed by hard lighting to repel their assailants unti Genera. Vanderveer came to their assistance with a force from Pi of Knos.

During the summer of 1863 the regiment accompanied General Davidson's cavalry division turough to Little Rock, Aga., and was present at the capture of the city on the Oth of September. A marca of over 400 miles was made to rescritnecity. From Little Book they were sent to Vicusourg and accombanied Genera. Sherman on his Meridan expedition, again marching some 400
